June 10th, 1983 -- RUN NO. 29

Ah yes, The Croweaters Run it was, and boy, did it live up to its billing. Error-prone, numerous groans and aching bones later, it led the pack through the Chinese burial grounds in a ring-around-the-cemetery where there was seemingly no way out. Up until the cemetery, the run was pretty interesting, but the living dead must have risen to the occasion to mislay some of the trail to confuse us simple mortal hashers. There was paper here, paper there, and all still going nowhere; it must have been a situation like that that inspired Eddie Rabbit to compose the song "every which way but loose (lose?)". But, in the true tradition of hashing, and over gravestones, tombstones and plain ol' pebblestones, some veteran hounds caught the brew-whiff home and led the motley bunch of loonies in their skimpy underclothes home towards Gymkhana Avenue and a spanking, bright new t-shirt each in choice of dirty yellow or red.

Through kampong, underbrush, overbrush, monsoon drain, cemetery and even a real-life road, the run was "pretty hashing". The pack was well-glued, and everyone was in at about the hour of seven (at about the same time that Tan's beer is at peak drinking temperature), with the weekly precentage of stragglers and misfits perfecting their portrayal of Gritz's fictionary MIAs.

In terms of the number of hashers, a show of numbers lent their support, with a sizeable representation of new "faeces", Houdini impostors, and an assortment of misplaced hashers both by country and by calendar.

On-On was at Andy's Beer Garden, where hares Andy and Sarah (Cash Register) Palmer were waiting Seconded P.R. Manager Peter was also waiting with his friendly Aussie opening line of "gals, just follow me ...." The combination of all of this, Lim's good tuck, and Andy's generous hospitality of assorted gifts, including the national food of Australia (vegemite) for Karna, there is not much left to say except, that the evening was great.

wyalldhavagurun-n-guononNdy.

And if you're looking for more adjectives, Dom Perignon will have to take the place of Remy Martin Andy. Cheers.

SCRIBE - Ray Ang (Thanks Ray).

$$$

SUBS :- Due now for the quarter- June- Aug -
Please make cheques payable to PAT LEGGETT, as we are still in the process of being registered, thank you.

$$$

CALLING "ON ON" DURING THE RUN

There is a distinct lack of calling, will all runners please keep calling all throughout the run. Those in the middle of the pack, your calling guides & helps to keep the runners behind you in contact with the whole pack, so please do not let these people down, thanks.

****